5 ways to curb holiday spending without being a scrooge:

1. Let your fingers do the walking and your budget do the talking: comparison shop from home, watch the flyers, search the web, phone local retailers then when you are ready to purchase make sure it fits in your budget.
2. Make a list and shorten it twice: consider cutting back on the number of gifts you buy and the people you buy for. Just buy for the children and your closest friend of family. You can reduce spending by giving handmade card or baking some cookies for those you've crossed off your list this year.
3. Spend time, not money: spend time with friends and family, they will remember the memories more than the gifts you gave.
4. Don't get caught up in one-day sales and specials; research your purchase, make a list and stick to it. Remember, you didn't save money if you didn't put money in the bank. Spending just for the sake of getting something on sale isn't saving.
5. Saying 'no' does not make you a Scrooge: learn to say 'I can't afford it', or 'that's just not in my budget this year', when you are asked to participate in office gift exchanges, multiple charitable donations and invites to the many holiday parties. Instead, say 'yes' to the things you really want to do that fit into your budget.
