In the May 1979 Canadian Federal Election, Joe Clark was voted in as Prime Minister and the Conservative Party as the federal government. This brought an end to 16 years of government by the Liberal Party, including Pierre Trudeau as Prime Minister from 1968-1979. Nine months later a no-confidence vote forced another federal election, which the Liberals won. Trudeau served another four years as the head of state.

Remarkably, "Joe Who?" isn't the shortest-serving Prime Minister. Two "caretaker" PMs after Clark, Kim Campbell (132 days in 1993) and John Turner (79 days in 1984), had briefer reigns in Ottawa. Charles Tupper holds the record: 68 days in 1896. Two years ago Liz Truss' tenure as British Prime Minister was 49 days.

 Thumbs down to those who feel the need to take the books out of the Hazelton book houses, rip them up & then throw them all over the ground. These book houses are meant to give people the opportunity to enjoy books not for you to destroy them. You can do better!

Happening July 20
This annual ride raises money for the Community Cancer Care Team based out of Smithers. They provide support to cancer patients and their families.

 Thumbs down to drivers speeding around on both back roads to get into Old Town, leaving lots of dust for the rest of us. You should also have some respect for the families who live there and have to deal with it on a daily basis for the next however long.
