Ally

We are looking for a long-term foster home for our super sweet Ally, who has been with us for a year now. She is an 11-year-old Boxer mix who came into our care after her owner passed away. She is the hiking queen and is easily tackling trails such as Call Lake and Malkow Lookout, longer hikes could leave her feeling a little stiff. Once her adventures are over Ally wants all the snuggles and cuddles. Ally can be quite dominant with other dogs which has gotten her into trouble in the past, and she would do better in a cat free home. Ally loves people of all ages and is super gentle with children. She does have allergies and is on hypoallergenic diet. We don't want Ally to spend her golden years at the shelter, so we are offering to discount her adoption fee, or consider a long-term foster situation where we will supply her food and cover medical costs. Can you provide this girl with a home of her own? Email info@nwas.ca

LNG PIPELINE STREAM and RIVER CROSSINGS

From the outlet of Babine Lake to the Cranberry River, the Prince Rupert Gas Transmission pipeline (PRGT) would cross 289 streams and rivers. Most of these crossings would use the "open cut" method, where the pipe is trenched directly across the riverbed. In some of the crossings, the watercourse would be dammed and pumped dry before the pipe was laid across. Drilling into the bedrock is planned to tunnel the pipeline under the Nilkitkwa, Shegunia, Skeena, Kispiox, and Cranberry.

"World class" construction methods on Coastal GasLink pipeline

When a pipeline is finished, it is pressure-tested with water. Each km of the 48"-diameter PRGT pipeline would require more than 1100 cubic metres of water. This water, taken from the Skeena watershed, could fill 70 Olympic-sized swimming pools – the daily water use of one-half a million Canadians. After testing, the water – contaminated with biocides, oils, and welding slag – would be discharged back into the watershed.

Salmon smolts in the Skeena estuary

The future of Skeena and Nass salmon is on the line. Construction of the Coastal GasLink Pipeline showed that neither industry or its regulators cared to prevent permanent damage to streams and rivers and the fish that live in them. We should expect no different if the PRGT was constructed in the Skeena watershed.

STOP THE PRGT!

Please write/call/email MLA, Nathan Cullen. Tell him that Skeena and Nass salmon are too precious and that PRGT requires a new environmental assessment.

Failed construction methods at Lamprey Creek on Coastal GasLink. Imagine this at Utsun Creek or the Suskwa River.

LIVING WITH LNG PIPELINE CONSTRUCTION

Construction of the PRGT pipeline would almost double the population of the Hazeltons for 3 1/2 years. Work camps housing 3,000 are planned for the Suskwa Valley, Salmon River Road, and two camps in the Kispiox Valley. Experience elsewhere has shown that the transient workforce of pipeline construction brings trouble to local communities, while draining resources and hammering infrastructure.

Pipeline construction would affect daily life in the Hazeltons:

- Industrial traffic on roads, noise
- Travel delays with checkpoints, bridge bottlenecks
- Restricted access to traditional territories
- Real estate speculation
- Higher property taxes
- Housing shortage, lack of rental housing
- Increase in crime, including property theft
- Greater risks to women and girls
- More drugs in the community, more addictions, more deaths
- Hospital and 9-1-1 services overwhelmed
- Landfill inundated
- Increased cost of living
- Grocery stores cleaned out
- Industrial "laydown yards" railyard in New Hazelton

800-person work camp on Coastal GasLink pipeline

The City of Terrace described its experience with Coastal GasLink Pipeline:

"The City of Terrace sees its role as a hub [of pipeline construction] as a detriment to Terrace and especially the quality of life for its residents. Being the hub has allowed for massive inflation in professional and retail services, a strain on municipal infrastructure like roads, refuse disposal, lodgings and housing. Some might see this influx as a key economic driver but it has actually been the opposite. The influx of workers required for this type of development has seen housing in Terrace reach an all time high in prices and a vacancy rate of less than 1%. We have seen double digit increase in our homeless population; now 1 in 8 are homeless. This spike is due to landlord evictions for higher rents and a sale market that is out of reach. With the homelessness and influx of remote workers to Terrace, crime has increased and with it significant increases to policing, and emergency response costs."

STOP THE PRGT!

Please write/call/email MLA, Nathan Cullen. Tell him that you do not want to see life in the Hazeltons destroyed by the PRGT pipeline.
