NOV 20

On This Day

In 1985, Microsoft released Windows 1.0 introducing computer users to a new way of working with windows, menus and a mouse instead of typing complicated commands. The program included a calculator, calendar, notepad and even a game called Reversi. Fast-forward 41 years where most computers have become part of nearly everything we do such as instant communication around the world, shop, pay bills, create a variety of publications, such as The Bulkley Browser :) and as of recent, even ask AI questions. Technology has certainly made life easier in many ways, but the constant change can be frustrating.

Fun Fact

According to social media, the world was to have experienced a 72-hour blackout on November 17, but there have been no creditable reports to suggest that a world-wide blackout was planned or expected. What seems to be the common factor is that recommendations were made to households to have enough emergency supplies to last at least 72 hours, which has been around for years. Remember, just because it's on social media that doesn't mean that it's always true.

Let's help Clint Wilson and Shasa DeVries from the Suskwa.

A few days ago their farmhouse was completely destroyed from a fire, taking everything they own. Clint was raised on this farm. It wasn't just somewhere he lived; it was his childhood home, a place filled with family history, lifelong memories, and everything he had built over the years. While we can't replace the sentimental belongings or memories tied to the farmhouse, we can come together as a community and help ease some of the financial pressure one faces after such a huge loss.
